BACKGROUND: SB 469 establishes an exemption for minors under the age of 17 from obtaining a business license from their local jurisdiction, or the state, if they are engaging in a business activity in which they are operating as a sole proprietor. The measure does not exempt any law, rule, or ordinance that requires a license, certificate, registration or other authorization to conduct a business activity that is subject to regulation.

A number of Oregon cities have general business licensure requirements either for the purpose of revenue or regulating business activities. Requirements for obtaining a license and exemptions differ from one city to another. For instance, the City of Bend does not require a business license for any service business, such as a lemonade stand, if the owner is less than 18 years old, and several cities explicitly exempt babysitting businesses from obtaining a business license. The City of Portland does not require a business license from any business grossing less than $50,000 per year.
