Introduction

December 2012

Dear Supporters and Partners of the Oregon Cultural Trust,

Ten years ago, Oregonians united around a vision to create something new and unique for Oregon culture, our arts, heritage and humanities. Voices came together from all over the state, from cultural leaders, the business community, regional leadership, from the tribes, community nonprofits. Their collective message: "Our cultural resources are strong and dynamic contributors to Oregon's communities and quality of life."

Now, as 2012 winds to a close, the Cultural Trust marks its tenth anniversary, and celebrates a decade of investing in and sustaining Oregon culture: preserving endangered places, inspiring children through the arts, touring our best performers to far-flung corners of the state, and sparking thoughtful discussion about issues important to us all.

Donations to the Trust in FY2012 totaled $3,791,913, made as 8,155 gifts. Gifts to the Trust enabled us to award $1.54 million in grants benefitting 60 cultural nonprofits, 36 county and six tribal coalitions and five partner agencies, up from $1.47 million to 57 nonprofits in FY2011.

The Cultural Trust has become recognized nationally for its innovative, inclusive approach. It's been compared to the Beach Bill, Bottle Bill and Vote by Mail as another of Oregon's forward-thinking progressive public policies. No other state or jurisdiction uses the creative mechanism of a tax credit to generate increased giving to cultural groups, and build a permanent fund for culture at the same time. Since 2002, over 21,000 Oregonians have contributed more than $28 million to the Trust, a testament to their interest in securing resources for the arts, heritage and humanities for the long term.

The Trust's county and tribal coalitions, one in each of our 36 counties and in six of the nine federally-recognized tribes, guarantee that cultural dollars reach into every region of the state. Volunteer community leaders contributed over 6,000 hours this year to oversee local cultural planning, build relationships to undertake cultural projects and manage the re-granting of Trust funds to benefit residents in even our smallest and most remote locations.

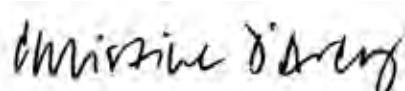

Some of the Trust's statewide ventures have been the most significant. As a result of our work with statewide partners, funding was secured to support Oregon's Poet Laureate, thus enabling Gov. John Kitzhaber to reappoint Poet Laureate Paulann Petersen to a second two-year term. A passionate spokeswoman for the Trust, Paulann Petersen has logged over 17,000 miles since her original appointment in 2010, giving readings, workshops, and lectures from Christmas Valley to Ione to Klamath Falls. This cultural outreach was made possible by generous gifts to the Cultural Trust.

Looking forward, 2013 will be a time to not only reflect on the Trust's success but its future. Oregon's cultural tax credit expires at the end of 2013, so the Trust will advocate for its extension, citing the importance of Oregon's cultural sector to the health of our economy, vitality and public education systems.

Culture continues to make a difference in Oregon – activating communities, simulating the economy and inspiring us. We're pleased to share some of those special stories in this report.

Christine D'Arcy, Executive Director

Oregon Cultural Trust

The Oregon Cultural Trust is Oregon's innovative private-public effort that generates significant new resources to sustain our arts, heritage and humanities.

Linked with Oregon's most forward thinking public policies – the Beach Bill, Bottle Bill and Vote by Mail, the Cultural Trust uses the incentive of a matching tax credit to increase giving to culture. Individuals making contributions of up to $500, couples making gifts of up to $1,000 and Oregon corporations giving up to $2,500 to one or more of 1,300 cultural nonprofits qualify for a tax credit when they make equal gifts to the Cultural Trust in the same tax year. Now considered a national model, this unique funding mechanism has raised over $25 million in new funds for culture since 2002. The Trust has granted over $12.5 million since 2003, supporting tours of music and dance to small communities, creating new work for audiences from Ashland to Portland to La Grande, preserving buildings and boats from Astoria to Baker City, and inspiring children and families through in and after-school programs, arts and heritage summer camps community library programs.

Over 21,000 Oregonians have contributed to the Trust since the cultural tax credit took effect in December 2002. The Oregon Cultural Trust permanent fund now stands at over $17 million.

Cultural Coalitions

of Cultural Coalitions Fosters Cultural Participation

Each year the Cultural Trust awards cultural participation grants to Oregon's 36 county and six tribal cultural coalitions. This localized grant-making mechanism is a core component of the Trust's funding strategies.

Oregon's cultural infrastructure of 36 county and six tribal coalitions is unique in the United States and considered a national model. The Trust uses a base grant of $6,000, plus a multiplier based on population, to determine the amount that each coalition receives. The 42 coalitions then stage their own competitive grant cycles to fund projects in their communities.

West Linn High School graduate Ashley Welp moved to Boston in Fall 2012, but the Emerson College freshman says she'll be back.

Welp credits a life-changing internship at Tigard's Broadway Rose Theatre Company with her acceptance to the prestigious East Coast arts school, so she hopes to return to Portland during the summers to continue her work with the theater company. "The interviewer from Emerson was impressed with my hands-on experience," said Welp of her two years of costuming and lighting work in the Broadway Rose internship.

Nick Bussey, a Tigard High School (THS) senior, completed his first year of internship at Broadway Rose. As thespian officer for the THS theater troupe, he cannot stress enough the importance of arts education. "I used to be very reserved," said the actor, who built sets for Broadway Rose's production The Sound of Music. "Now I can think on my feet better. I'm a more confident public speaker," he said. "I am much more open because of my involvement with theater."

The Broadway Rose program, funded in part by the Cultural Coalition of Washington County, is supplementing the education of Nick and Ashley Welp. But for others, the internships fill a gap that public school no longer covers. For others still, a life in the theater is not the objective, but, as

The Salem Art Association's Salem Art Fair and Festival received support from the Marion Cultural Development Corporation, the coalition in that area.

Production Manager Meghan Newton puts it, "they study to become engineers, doctors. They are doing other work that requires the teamwork, leadership, and decision making skills they learn here. They go out in the world and have something to draw on." This year the company employed over 30 interns, high school students aged 15–20 who had shown interest in the technical aspects of theater.

In Klamath County, Chiloquin Visions in Progress received a grant to bring a published writer to Chiloquin High School for nine weeks. The residency provides outlets for student creativity, and it underscored the importance of writing for young people.

On the Southern Oregon Coast, the Coos County Cultural Coalition awarded Bandon High School a $1,000 grant to repair 12 non-working instruments owned by the school band, among them an oboe, a coronet, and two tenor saxophones, which will be loaned to students from lower income families.

The repairs have helped spark new interest in band. The current 20-student group had 11 members last year and calls itself Band Nerd Herd.

The argument for well-rounded education comes as many schools lose arts funding, particularly at the elementary school levels, where children often discover talents, interests and, more subtly but of equal importance, the idea of civic engagement. Said Broadway Rose intern Nick Bussey "I am more involved in the school, in what happens with the school, because of the theater."

Fellow intern Ashley Welp echoes his sentiment, emphasizing that the West Linn High School theater program and her time at Broadway Rose have made her a better person. "I would have been socially awkward (otherwise). I didn't have a place to belong. The theater has so many niches for so many people."

Cultural Partners

The Cultural Trust's Vital Collaborators
– the Five Statewide Cultural Agencies

The Oregon Cultural Trust defines “culture” as arts, heritage and humanities. This broad understanding enables the Trust to partner with five organizations, Oregon Arts Commission, Oregon Humanities, Oregon Heritage Commission, the State Historic Preservation Office and the Oregon Historical Society, and to fund in all areas.

The Cultural Trust provides partner grants to each of these organizations to augment or enhance programs and projects in their own fields.

In FY2012, the five partners were awarded a combined total of $411,492.

Oregon Humanities received $137,164 to fund its statewide Conversations Project, covering topics as diverse as Gender and Pop Music, The Act of Reading in the Digital Age, and Science and Democracy. The Trust grant also aids in the publication of Oregon Humanities magazine. Finally, Oregon Humanities used Trust grant money to run a weeklong philosophy camp in which Oregon children from all walks of life explored the question, “What is happiness?”

Oregon Arts Commission used its grant of $137,164 to award fellowships and career opportunity grants to individual artists in Oregon, allowing them to advance their careers or maximize exposure to new markets. Writer Cheryl Strayed was awarded an FY12 grant to attend the Association of Writers and Writing Programs (AWP) conference as a presenter on two panels. She used the opportunity to promote her nonfiction memoir Wild, which was published two weeks after the conference.

Oregon Heritage Commission, State Historic Preservation Office and Oregon Historical Society split the heritage allotment in thirds, each receiving $45,721. OHS used its Trust grant to fund its education coordinator, serving an increasing number of school groups. The Heritage Commission used $45,721 for technical support of the Oregon

Encyclopedia project and SHPO used its share for historic preservation projects.

In addition to these grants, the five partners collaborate each year and allocate 20% of their overall funds to support projects that touch upon all aspects of culture – arts, heritage, and humanities.

In FY2012, Collaborative Partner Grants were awarded to the Oregon Folklife Network ($25,000), the Poet Laureate ($25,000) and The Confluence Project ($50,000). Oregon Poet Laureate Paulann Petersen, who was reappointed to a second term by Gov. John Kitzhaber in April 2012, has logged over 16,000 travel miles bringing poetry to Oregon school children, libraries, senior homes and other public venues. Oregon Folklife Network programmed a Native Language-Arts apprenticeship program and a comprehensive digital media campaign that involved web-based Interactive maps of Oregon's folk resources, cellular phone applications for finding folk events, and educational games for youth. The Confluence Project grant funded a new, interactive website and a free-flowing children's art project called "Gifts of our Ancestors."

Jane Jacobsen, Executive Director of The Confluence Project, was thrilled when she learned of the grant. "I count the Cultural Trust right there with NEA in terms of the prestige and meaning of this grant."

Confluence Project Awarded Collaborative Partner Grant for Oregon Legacy Project

When construction of The Dalles Dam in 1957 submerged the powerful Celilo Falls and its sacred Indian fishing grounds, the loss for the Native peoples and for Oregon culture was profound.

In the last 10 years however, a small nonprofit has been working to bring together tribal, federal, and state government with arts, heritage and humanities organizations to heal this painful historical event.

Since 2002 The Confluence Project, in collaboration with several Pacific Northwest tribes and renowned artist Maya Lin, has completed four interpretive art and heritage projects along the Columbia River with a mission “to treat the Columbia River as one art site – connected by key ‘confluences’ of rivers, languages, histories and art, to show us how culture ties us through time and place.”

The organization has taken great emotional risks with the complicated and painful history of Celilo. The intrepid group was prepared to wade through bureaucracy, cultural differences, and hard memories, to bring all stakeholders together and begin the healing process. The result is a plan for Celilo Park and the Celilo Falls site that will use art to honor memory and history, and simultaneously to create conversation and possibility in the wake of an Oregon tragedy.

The Celilo project, in all phases of its development and implementation, and when completed, will leave Oregon a legacy of shared understanding and responsibility for the health and diversity of our communities. "This is our homeland," said Executive Director Jane Jacobsen, "and Celilo is the root of heritage in the Northwest. To have the Cultural Trust on board with its incredible breadth of understanding, means the world to us."

Development Grants

Development Grants Support Cultural Projects Statewide

Sitka Center for Art & Ecology in Otis used a Cultural Trust grant to expand its Artists Residency Program that gives opportunities to artists, writers and musicians.

The Trust's Cultural Development grants support significant opportunities to advance, preserve or stabilize cultural resources. Many of the funded projects support activity that has a broad cultural impact beyond the applicant itself.

The grants provide recognition and support to cultural programs that preserve and present Oregon's diverse arts, heritage and humanities. Funded projects fall within four categories: Access: Making culture broadly available to Oregonians. Preservation: Investing in Oregon's cultural heritage by recovering and preserving historic assets and achievements. Creativity: The making and/or presentation of artistic or scholarly work, and the development of artists, cultural experts and scholars. Capacity: The strengthening of cultural organizations to build stability and generate public confidence.

In FY2012, the Trust awarded $514,364 in competitive grants to 60 cultural organizations in 14 counties. Grants were matched with over $8,491,167 in earned and contributed funds.

GRANT FOCUS: CENTURY FARM & RANCH PROGRAM

Farms and Ranches Are Rich Legacy for Oregon

The Morgan Ranch outside Paisley turned 100 years old this year. Brenda Morgan still remembers her grandmother, (Cora) Belle Johnson, who bought the Lake County ranch on June 10, 1912. "She wore long dresses and black boots that laced up the front with a stacked heel, but she and my other grandmother were women's liberates. They were very assertive for their time." Belle drove a car when her husband Vancil eschewed the tractor, and she raised eight children in a home with no electricity, no running water, and an outdoor bathroom. "The families would have starved to death if not for her and my other grandmother," said Morgan.

Belle also kept her children in line, disciplining them to work on, and later run, the ranch. According to Morgan, "The kids milked about 15 cows before going to school each morning ... and again at the end of the day." In 1929, a new home was built on the ranch. "Vancil, Cora Belle and the kids old enough to straighten used nails built the house from used lumber and moved in that fall."

But since Vancil didn't believe in contemporary luxuries like indoor plumbing, the family did without creature comforts until his death in 1958. "He wasn't cold in the grave before (my grandmother) got a bathroom in the house," Morgan recalled.

These accounts of hardship and changing times give Oregonians an important legacy. Not only do they evoke an era when life was both slower and harder, they also open a pinhole on a piece of modern culture. Likewise, many of the family-owned farms and ranches espouse the food values for which Oregon is renowned: organic, sustainable agriculture, humane treatment of livestock, and farm-to-table relationships.

The Oregon Century Farm and Ranch program works to keep these stories alive, and the Cultural Trust is helping.

Founded in 1958, the Century Farm and Ranch program honors farm and ranch families with century-long connections to their land. Families seeking Century Farm/Ranch status go through a formal application process, submitting photos, original deeds, personal stories and historic records. These documents provide archival information on Oregon's agricultural history, settlement patterns, livestock and crop cycles.

In FY2012, the Trust granted the program $3,000 to enhance its marketing efforts: hiring a photographer, updating its website, creating a brochure and starting an e-newsletter.

The result? According to Program Coordinator Sharon Leighty, the program received 19 applications for Century or Sesquicentennial Farm status this year, compared to 12 the year before, an increase of 37%. "We have seen an increased awareness of our program," she said.

The Century Farm and Ranch Program, administered by the Oregon Agricultural Education Foundation and supported by partnerships that include Oregon Farm Bureau, the State Historic Preservation Office and the Oregon Travel Information Council, puts the number of Century Farms/Ranches at 1,177 and the number of Sesquicentennial Farms at 25. When surveyed as to why they applied, families cited a proud heritage as one reason, and the opportunity to build awareness about their continued ability to farm or ranch their land as another.

Unlike many states, where farming and ranching is controlled by large corporations, 98% of Oregon farms and ranches are family-owned. But, as Brenda Morgan noted, "This is not an economic unit by itself." Most farmers and ranchers in Oregon still struggle to make a living.

As her family's ranch celebrates its first triple-digit birthday, Morgan, born in 1946, wonders who will take over for her and her husband. She says she hopes one of her grandchildren will fall in love with the place and have the maturity and business acumen to keep it viable.

Meanwhile, she applied for Century Ranch status because, "I thought it would be fun for the family, that it would mean something to them."

Oregon Rail Heritage Foundation volunteers work on the organization's site on Portland's east side. Locomotive #700 sits on the tracks.

GRANT FOCUS: OREGON RAIL HERITAGE FOUNDATION

Rail Center Puts Historic Engines on Track for the Public

In 1958, three major railroads each made large gifts to the City of Portland. The Southern Pacific gave the #4449, a 1941 locomotive; Spokane Portland Seattle Railroad (SP&S, which later became the Burlington Northern) donated the 1938 locomotive #700, and Oregon River and Navigation Railway, which later became part of Union Pacific, gifted engine #197, a 1905 treasure that had run, brand new, during the June – October 1905 Lewis & Clark World's Fair.

Originally displayed in Southeast Portland's Oaks Park, the three engines sat, exposed to the weather and unmaintained for nearly two decades. Eventually, the locomotives were moved to the Brooklyn Roundhouse, where they were sheltered but inaccessible to the public. In 1976, the Southern Pacific 4449 was painted red, white and blue for the Bicentennial and pulled the Freedom Train around the country. But it too was soon relegated to the roundhouse, until the Oregon Rail Heritage Foundation (ORHF) was founded in 1998.

The fledgling nonprofit immediately made secure storage and restoration of the engines, as well as public viewing and educational sharing, its mission.

Thanks to a successful capital campaign and generous donations from Tri-Met, private legacy gifts and the Cultural Trust, the Oregon Rail Heritage Center (ORHC) opened on September 22, 2012, with the restored engines proudly on display.

The Cultural Trust's $30,000 grant played a significant role in the capital campaign, according to ORHF Executive Director Phil Selinger. "It brought us that much closer to having a financially feasible project." Trust participation also brought credibility to the endeavor. "Cultural Trust involvement gave our project a great deal of credibility and respect," said Selinger.

The Oregon Rail Heritage Center is the newest attraction to be located in Portland's increasingly revitalized east side. Combined with OMSI and the USS Blueback (the 1959 submarine that earned two battle stars for her service in the Vietnam War), the Eastside Esplanade, and a host of restaurants in the area, the center will bring visitors and locals to what was once a raw industrial area. And it serves as a reminder that this part of Portland boasts a rich history in transportation. Union Pacific freight trains roll past the door of the locomotives' new home. MAX trains are easily accessible and the new streetcar line will run right over the building.

"Portland is known for its innovation in rail. It's a great location," said Selinger. The rail center has been welcomed by its neighbors, Selinger noted. "They recognize the added value of the attraction for children, families and history buffs."

KLAMATH FALLSRoss Ragland Theater, $4,000

To support an outreach and education program providing curriculum-based cultural experiences to over 8,000 children from 42 schools in a four-county area.

Shaw Historical Library, $5,000

GRANT FOCUS: HIGH DESERT MUSEUM

Exhibit Explores African-American Experience in Oregon

On a clear day in late Spring 2012, a group of 100 visitors converged on The High Desert Museum in Bend to see the exhibit, Black Impact: African-American History in the Far West. The tour group was none other than Black Ski Inc., a party of African-American skiers from Washington DC who had come to shred the slopes on Mt. Bachelor. They had decided to make a side trip to see the museum's tribute to African American settlers in the Oregon Territory.

With a $12,000 grant from the Trust, the High Desert Museum assembled partners, including the Northwest Black Pioneers of Oregon, Maxville Heritage Interpretive Center, University of Oregon and Central Oregon Community College, to create the first comprehensive exhibition on Oregon's rich Black heritage.

In addition to the exhibit itself, the museum organized a number of accompanying events: such lectures as "Why Aren't There More Black People in Oregon?" hosted by Central Oregon Community College; a talk by Dr. Melissa Stuckey, a professor of African-American Studies at the University of Oregon; and a showing of OPB's Oregon Experience program, The Logger's Daughter, featuring Gwen Trice, founder of the center at Maxville.

Far from stopping at pioneer history, the groundbreaking exhibit examined Oregon's own exclusion laws, and displayed copies of the Oregon Green Book circa 1930, a travel guide that listed businesses welcoming Black patrons during Jim Crow.

High Desert Museum Vice President of Programs Dana Whitelaw recalled that even the curators were "startled" by such documents and artifacts. "The Green Book listed beauty parlors, car mechanics, places where African-Americans could stay and be safe. There were garages that wouldn't even work on your car if you were not White. We thought Oregon was more progressive," she said.

The museum's family events opened fresh, albeit less disturbing, perspectives. Several school and weekend children's programs offered discussion points and hard skills. A Saturday program called "Standing on Their Shoulders" encouraged children to make traditional African "wrap dolls" from pipe cleaners. The museum added a philosophical element, encouraging children to wrap mentor's names into the dolls' clothing. A more structured school program used Black Impact to teach curating techniques to 90 Central Oregon fifth graders.

Executive Director Janeanne Upp noted that the exhibition attracted 40,000 visitors to the museum; 78% were from outside Central Oregon, meaning longer stays – according to Central Oregon Visitors' Association, the average stay in the area was 2.6 nights – a significant impact on lodging and dining establishments, retail stores, attractions and service sector businesses. Of the 40,000 visitors, over 4,000 were students who came with school groups, the majority from Central Oregon or the Willamette Valley.

Program VP Whitelaw could not stress enough the importance of the Cultural Trust grant. "It was an incredibly significant gift for us," said Whitelaw, "and not just the financial support but also being recognized. It is really a badge of honor."

GRANT FOCUS: HISTORIC PRESERVATION LEAGUE OF OREGON

Grant to HPLO Preserves Endangered Places

The Francis Ermatinger House in Oregon City had been moved twice in its 160-year life. But, despite support from an ardent group of preservationists, the historic home had fallen into such disrepair that it almost caved in on itself.

The Historic Preservation League of Oregon recognized the significance of the Ermatinger House, site of the famous coin toss between Francis Pettygrove and Asa Lovejoy that led to the naming of Portland. The League also noted the urgent matter of its stabilization and restoration. "It was literally collapsing," said HPLO Executive Director Peggy Moretti.

Through its new initiative, "Oregon's Endangered Places," HPLO advocated for the historic home. In addition to providing financial support to the Oregon City group striving to save it, HPLO facilitated grant proposals to other funders and secured funding for the Ermatinger House from the City of Oregon City. As a result, the home is on the road to recovery, with restoration plans and strategies outlined and reconstruction beginning.

HPLO works tirelessly to rescue historic properties from neglect, demolition and overzealous development. In FY2012, a $6,000 grant from the Cultural Trust helped fund the first year of the Oregon's Most Endangered Places program.

After a call for nominations, HPLO selected the 10 most endangered places in Oregon. The selections then received substantial technical assistance including funding for preservation plans, help in preparing National Register nominations, technical support from HPLO staff and volunteers, and physical restoration projects.

The Cultural Trust grant benefited the 10 most endangered places for the 2011/12 year. The results included:

- Repurposing the Baker City Middle School, a 1917 Ellis Lawrence design scheduled for demolition.

- Creating a laser scan of the Petersen Rock Garden in Redmond to make restoration plans and apply for National Historic Register status.
- Working on a condition assessment for the 1840s-era Watson Price Barn, near Philomath.
- Attempting to save the 1900 Dr. Pierce's Barn in Cottage Grove from demolition.
- Assisting advocates for the 1908 Tillamook Bay Lifesaving Station at Rockaway Beach to apply for National Historic Register status.
- Leveraging grant money with the Coquille Tribal Fund to rehabilitate the 1922 Egyptian Theater in Coos Bay. The Egyptian could reopen as early as 2013.
- Funding physical restoration projects at the 1860 Josiah Burnett House near Estacada.
- Helping supporters of the 1906 Kirk Whited Farmstead near Redmond apply for National Historic Register status, which would defend against encroachment by developers.
- Rescuing the 1938 Eugene Civic Stadium from groups that would see it demolished, including its owner, the Eugene School District.

In addition to HPLO support, each of the 10 communities received historic preservation education. Said Moretti, "This is the essential ingredient; the community has to be behind the restorations."

Though several of the properties are still endangered, Cultural Trust assistance helped HPLO and the communities buy time.

"To receive support from the Cultural Trust is a stamp of recognition for this effort," said Moretti. "When the Cultural Trust is involved, it helps the community wake up and say, 'these are cultural projects.'"

GRANT FOCUS: PORTLAND ART MUSEUM AND THIRD ANGLE MUSIC ENSEMBLE

Trust Helps Rothko Reach Critical Mass in Portland

The Portland Art Museum and Third Angle Musical Ensemble know how to create a buzz around town.

From February to May 2012, the Portland Art Museum presented Mark Rothko: Portland to New York, an exhibition of works spanning Rothko's entire career, on loan from the National Gallery in Washington DC, private collections and the Rothko Family Collection.

During the show's run, Third Angle Musical Ensemble performed Morton Feldman's Rothko Chapel, commissioned for the dedication of the Rothko Chapel in Houston, Texas, to a sold-out audience of 478 concert-goers at the Art Museum.

Those events sparked other celebrations, including an opening weekend lecture by Rothko's son Christopher Rothko, who spoke to a sold-out hall of 500 people at the art museum; a West Coast premiere of the Tony Award-winning play Red based on the life of Mark Rothko, and a discussion, attended by 152 visitors, between Portland Center Stage Associate Artistic Director Rose Riordan and Bruce Guenther, Chief Curator of the museum. McMenamins' Kennedy School hosted a History Pub on "Portland and the Art of Rothko." That event also sold out, drawing 225 attendees. And finally, the museum held a two-part lecture by Klaus Ottomann, Director of the Center for the Study of Modern Art and Curator at Large of the Phillips Collection in Washington, DC.

The result? A citywide celebration of Mark Rothko, a Russian Jewish immigrant who arrived in Portland at age 10, before the Russian Revolution. Though Rothko moved to New York City as an adult, he gravitated back to the Northwest several times before his death in 1970.

When both the Art Museum and Third Angle approached the Cultural Trust for grants, the Trust recognized the importance not only of the respective roles the presenters would play, but also the opportunity of the partnership to impact the public's knowledge and appreciation of an acclaimed artist and historical figure.

The Trust awarded $20,000 to Portland Art Museum and $4,000 to Third Angle, who spearheaded what came to be called The Rothko Spring. Said Third Angle Executive Director Lisa Volle, "Ron (Blessinger, Artistic Director of Third Angle) and Bruce (Guenther of Portland Art Museum) had been talking about it for years, how to bring all the Rothko pieces together."

Added Beth Heinrich, the museum's director of public relations and marketing, "Rothko is one of the most exhibited artists in the world. To do a retrospective (was going to be) difficult. Pieces are promised years out."

Thanks to the generosity of the Rothko children and funders like the Cultural Trust, the Museum brought 45 Rothko paintings to Portland, forming the largest comprehensive exhibit on Rothko in the Western United States since 1933.

The draw of the Rothko celebration went beyond initial estimates. The Art Museum expected 55,000 visitors. The exhibition brought in 88,000. Over 14,500 visitors came to the museum's free events, including 9,390 children. The exhibit attracted 8,700 visitors during the closing weekend alone. Out-of-town visitors booked lodging and dining and used parking and retail businesses.

"It was a huge impact," said Heinrich of the cross-promotions.

Every exhibit at Portland Art Museum is funded through a variety of sources.

Said Heinrich, "We couldn't have put on the Rothko exhibit without substantial support. To receive $20,000 is very significant and to have the commitment and support of the Cultural Trust is very important."
