BACKGROUND: House Bill 3438 was submitted at the request of a police chief in House District 49. Oregon law currently allows for the use of photo radar in school zones, but with certain restrictions. Currently, photo radar can only be used in certain cities in Oregon. Additionally, when it is in use it can only be operational for four hours in one location before it must be moved and requires the presence of a uniformed police officer with a marked police car at the site.

House Bill 3438 makes several changes to existing statutes governing photo radar. First, it allows any city in Oregon to operate photo radar in school zones. It also expands the length of time that a photo radar unit may be operated daily from the current four-hour limit to allowing it to operate between 7 a.m. and 5 p.m. when school is in session. Finally, the measure specifies that any photo radar system in a school zone must be capable of making a video recording, replacing the need for a police officer to be present at the photo radar unit. A citation from law enforcement would then be issued if a police officer has reviewed the video recording and signed the citation.
