I fully support Taylor's Law in Oregon. I have suffered for years the loss of a family member. The mark it leaves on a family leaves a deep scar that never completely heals. Yes, it is possible to deal with the loss, but we will always remember the lost family member. For the people who cause the loss of a family member, I think that 5 years is NOT ENOUGH to pay for their crime, which is really murder. I sincerely do hope that Oregon does get off its high horse, comes to grips with the reality of the situation, and passes this to make it a long standing statute in our state. Hopefully the Oregon legislature will "draw the line" and punish those who kill victims and harm their families.....
