To whom it may concern,

Taylor's Law will ultimately save lives and reduce drug trafficking. Drug dealers have no fear of selling to those with an opioid addiction because there is absolutely no repercussion in their future. There must be added consequences.

My husband and I have both lost close friends because of opioid addictions. My friend was Taylor Joseph Martinek. Neither of the dealers who sold them their death drug felt any of the pain, to which their families and friends suffered. Taylor's Law will make an impact. It will remove dangerous drug dealers who effortlessly sell deadly drugs to those who experience addiction; so many of whom are tremendously loved and come from healthy backgrounds.

This is not an end, but a beginning to reducing the burden left behind by drug dealers who consciously sell lethal products.

Sincerely,

Meg Pickering
