BACKGROUND:

International Baccalaureate (IB) is an educational program established by the nonprofit International Baccalaureate Organization (IBO) in Geneva, Switzerland in 1968 to provide the children of diplomats with a common curriculum that would be recognized as these students moved across international borders. Today, the IB program has expanded to the general student population, providing a curriculum based on international standards to more than 4,000 schools worldwide. In 2017, 17 Oregon high schools offered an IB program, with 2,292 students completing 5,595 IB courses. The IB program requires high school students to complete an external, standardized exam for each IB course. Scores on these exams range from one (lowest) to seven (highest). Many universities and colleges will offer college credit to student who receive a minimum score on an IB exam. Typically, Oregon public universities and community colleges award credit for IB exam scores of five or higher. Senate Bill 160 would require all Oregon public universities and community colleges to award credit for scores of four or higher, unless an institution is granted an exception. This bill is modeled on Senate Bill 207 (2017) that required public higher education institutions to provide credit to students completing Advanced Placement (AP) examinations.
