BACKGROUND:

The Oregon State Police Fish and Wildlife Division (Division) is charged with enforcing fish, wildlife, environmental, and other criminal laws and protecting people, property, and natural resources. The Division is comprised of 120 sworn officers assigned statewide with specific duties and responsibilities to ensure compliance with natural resource laws. The Division attends various meetings, gives presentations to sporting enthusiast groups, educates students of all ages, assists with hunter education classes and field days, and shows support at angling derbies and other outdoor-related events.

House Bill 3087 would require the Oregon Department of Fish and Wildlife (ODFW) to establish an anti-poaching awareness program.
