BACKGROUND:

The nine-member Oregon Orchardgrass Seed Producers Commission is one of 21 commodity commissions in Oregon, established to support commodity industries vital to the state economy. Orchardgrass seed produces a tall-growing, cool-season, perennial bunchgrass that is used for forage, such as pasture, hay, greenchop, and silage.

House Bill 3401 would abolish the Oregon Orchardgrass Seed Producers Commission and provide for the Oregon Tall Fescue Commission to assume winding up remaining business affairs.
