ISSUES DISCUSSED:

EFFECT OF AMENDMENT:

No amendment.

BACKGROUND:

Currently, the crime of unlawful dissemination of an intimate image prohibits disclosure of an identifiable image through an Internet website. It does not prohibit the dissemination of images transmitted via the Internet, including through text or apps. The dissemination of intimate images by means other than the Internet is currently governed by ORS 166.065 and constitutes harassment only when the image involves a minor.

House Bill 2393 A removes the language requiring disclosure to occur via an Internet website in order for the crime of unlawful dissemination of an intimate image to occur. It also subsumes conduct relating to disclosure of an image of a minor found in the harassment statute, ORS 166.065(1)(a)(C), consolidating the two crimes into one. Additionally, the measure creates a private right of action for the person, or the parents or guardian of the person, depicted in the image, but caps liability for the defendant at $5,000 per plaintiff.
