BACKGROUND:

In 2014 Oregon voters enacted Ballot Measure 91, allowing the recreational use of marijuana for persons 21 years or older in Oregon. The measure directed the Oregon Liquor Control Commission (OLCC) to administer and regulate the recreational system. Under the OLCC licensing process, applicants submit a license application in the online licensing system and pay an application fee. OLCC receives the application and a license investigator begins a completeness review, followed by a compliance review. An OLCC inspector also visits the site to determine compliance with physical requirements. If an applicant meets all application and premise inspection requirements, and all fees are paid, the license is issued. Licenses must be renewed annually.

Measure 91 and subsequent legislation created a recreational marijuana system intended to convert illegal and grey market producers and consumers to the legal market. The barriers to entry are lower in Oregon than other states. "The number of applications for licenses to produce recreational marijuana has also continued to exceed expectations. Decreasing consumer prices are a direct result of supply that exceeds demand and have increased market pressure on licensed operators throughout the supply chain." Supply in the recreational market is twice the level of current demand. (Executive Summary, OLCC 2019 Recreational Marijuana Supply and Demand Legislative Report).

Senate Bill 218-B allows the OLCC to refuse to issue initial marijuana production licenses based on the supply of and demand for marijuana through January 2, 2022.
