BACKGROUND:

In 2016, to address an affordable housing shortfall in some rural counties, the Legislative Assembly enacted House Bill 4079, authorizing the Land Conservation and Development Commission to select two affordable housing pilot projects nominated by local governments. The measure specified that two projects would be selected from sites nominated by local governments: a city with a population less than 25,000, and a city with a population greater than 25,000. The measure targeted specific Oregon counties and imposed certain planning requirements on nominating local governments, including limiting the total acreage of all lots and parcels included in each pilot site to 50 acres or less.

Bend and Redmond, both with populations over 25,000, were the only two applicants in the original pilot, and Bend was selected. A subsequent measure in 2019, House Bill 2336, allowed for Redmond to be selected as the second city in the pilot as no cities with a population of less than 25,000 nominated a qualified pilot project.

House Bill 2160 allows the Land Conservation and Development Commission to consider an affordable housing pilot project nominated by the City of Pendleton, subject to certain conditions. The measure sunsets the affordable housing pilot program on January 2, 2028.
