BACKGROUND:

Oregon currently has seven public universities and 17 community colleges. Each institution has an independent financial and governance structure and is overseen by the Higher Education Coordinating Commission.

Mergers of higher education institutions have become increasingly common in other states. In 2011, Georgia began a decade-long process of consolidating its state colleges and universities. Pennsylvania, Vermont, Delaware and Minnesota are in the process of implementing mergers as well.

Senate Bill 1 allows for a merger between a community college and a university, and outlines a process for the merger to be approved.
