BACKGROUND:

The Public Utility Commission (PUC) is responsible for rate regulation of Oregon's investor-owned electric utilities, natural gas utilities, and telephone service providers, as well as select water companies. The mission of the PUC is to ensure Oregon utility customers have access to safe, reliable, and high quality utility services at just and reasonable rates.

In 1987, the Legislative Assembly enacted the Oregon Telephone Assistance Program, commonly known as Oregon Lifeline, with the goal of providing all Oregonians with access to adequate and affordable telephone service. Jointly funded by both the federal government and the state, the program reduces the monthly cost of telephone service for qualifying low-income Oregon households. Until 2019, qualifying low-income customers received broadband assistance only through the federal program. The Legislative Assembly aligned Oregon Lifeline with federal regulations by adding broadband to the services for which a qualifying low-income customer may receive state assistance in addition to federal assistance.

House Bill 3256 requires the PUC to study laws related to telecommunications and report the results by September 15, 2022.
