BACKGROUND:

In 2014, the Oregon Public Guardian and Conservator (OPGC) was established within the Office of Long Term Care Ombudsman. The OPGC is tasked with providing guardianship and conservatorship services for persons who do not have relatives or friends willing or able to provide those services and who lack the resources to hire a professional fiduciary. If a criminal defendant is determined unable to aid in their own defense, the criminal proceeding against the defendant is suspended until such time as the defendant has gained or regained their fitness to proceed. In some instances, the defendant is released into the community.

Senate Bill 579 requires the Oregon Public Guardian and Conservator establish a program to provide guardianship services to defendants unable to aid and assist in their own defense and who have been or will be released into the community. Priority is given to defendants who are at high risk of suffering serious harm following release, defendants the court has found, or is likely to find, is unable to gain or regain capacity to stand trial, or defendants at high risk of reoffending. SB 579 appropriates $1.7 million for the program.
