BACKGROUND:

Oregon law allows a person who holds a direct shipper permit from the Oregon Liquor Control Commission to sell and ship malt beverages, wine, or cider directly to a resident of this state. The permit holder may send no more than two cases containing no more than nine liters per case to any resident each month.

Senate Bill 406 A increases the amount of wine that a direct shipper permit holder may send each month to a resident to five cases, with each case containing no more than nine liters. The measure retains the existing monthly shipping limit for malt beverages and cider, which is two cases that contain no more than nine liters each.
