BACKGROUND:

Enacted in 2017, Oregon's predictive work scheduling laws require retail, food service, and hospitality employers with 500 or more employees worldwide to provide good faith estimates of employees' work schedules, seven days advanced written notice of work schedules, predictability pay when schedules change, and extra compensation for hours worked when fewer than 10 hours separate shifts. The law also gives employees the right to identify any limitations or changes in their work schedule availability and to request to not be scheduled for work shifts during certain times or at certain locations. Employers are not obligated to grant an employee's request, but may not retaliate against an employee for making a schedule request.

Senate Bill 716-A amends Oregon's predictive scheduling laws to explicitly include child care needs under the work schedule limitations or changes that an employee may request of a large retail, food service, or hospitality employer.
