

This bill aims at insuring access to quality healthcare. Having an interpreter feels to me like a basic human dignity that should be afforded to those who need it. I have heard horror stories of people having to provide their own interpreters (often their children or grandchildren) when they go to the doctor or counselor. There are good interpreters who need the work and will provide clients a better standard of care.