

While I agree racism should be recognized shaming our children and destroying their faith in their country and homes is not the answer blanket assumptions about a certain group of people is prejudice no matter who that group of people may be. If we teach our children that hatred is the only thing worth focusing on then how will they learn to love