

Land use and transportation planning have a huge impact on our energy use and environmental impact. People need to be able to live well in denser urban environments, and access daily needs without using large amounts of energy to travel long distances or at high speeds.