

When I moved to Willamette View in Oak Grove last year I had them install my charging station in my garage. I live in a duplex. However, there are more places where we need charging infrastructure around the state. All new construction should require a electrical systems for a specific number of charging units that charge at a fast rate. There have to be more than one or two stations that take two hours or more to charge an extra hundred miles. I am concerned about parks, recreational sites, hotels. In fact, there should be help for upgrading existing sites. But, at least, we can move forward with new construction.
