

I personally attended private schools in elementary, middle, high, college, and post college schools. I also attended state, public schools in elementary, college, and post college schools. The value of having citizens, parents, students determine what type of education best suits their goals is unquestionable, and is necessary for our country to retain its education as the envy of other countries. Private schools frequently provide for the discipline and moral values which are more and more being lost both through legislation and economic necessity. We should not impose legislative requirements on our private education which undermine the ability of both parents and educators of these institutions to provide educational options for all our citizens.
