

I support this resolution - If someone has missed 10 days of work without cause they need to be fired and not rehired. If a person has been elected to do a job, they should not get to refuse to do their job and be able to get elected again. I would even say 10 days is far too many. It's 29% of a short session. In order for representative democracy to work, our representatives have to actually show up.
