

Roosevelt Elk herds have lived on the Oregon Coast since Lewis and Clark landed here. Houses, golf courses and highways have been built in the elk's home territory.

Killing some of the elk would be a temporary measure. Please work to find a better solution.

Are the elk able to safely move to large tracts of forest? Do we need to create corridors for them to move away from housing developments and golf courses? How about highway underpasses or overpasses as built under highway 97 to prevent car accidents? The owner of Gearhart Golf Course has offered to pay to move the elk.

Thank you for your consideration.
