

AmeriCorps Members sacrifice a salary, their time and so much more to serve their communities and provide direct benefit to those in low-income areas and with access to less resources. They should not be punished by taxing the one benefit they earn through their term of service: an education award to pay back previous loans or put towards future schooling. By taxing the AmeriCorps education award, you are stealing money from Americans who serve their country and deserve access to affordable higher education. The AmeriCorps education award should not be taxed.