

I just moved to the island July of 2020 and have experienced unhealthy air conditions that are actually frightening. The air is so thick with the smell of gas that it is dangerous to have my window open. It took me some time to figure out what was happening. After many nights of calling emergency services, air quality control, lodging complaints with management where I live and talking with my neighbors I discovered that it was Econolube and it was a well-known issue around here.

The air is so thick with chemicals it's like someone is trying to commit suicide by way of gas but on an epic level because you cannot escape it and it's outdoors! It smells as if my house will combust at any moment. Each time the smell gets intense, I run around checking the stove, freaking out looking for leaks thinking the building is about to blow. I then step outside and realize it is the air outside and there is no gas leak! I have to close all of my windows and hide in my house so the air won't kill me and so do all of my neighbors. It is constant and sometimes it's worse than other times. Being outside here is not safe. Breathing the air here is not safe.

Please help us.
