

Is there anything more important to a sense of community than the neighborhood theater? Not the cineplex, but a true-blue independent theater.

Along with a bookstore & restaurants (and for some people, a church or school or sports complex) a local theater is a critical part of a town's social fabric. We HAVE to keep them going until they can thrive on their own. Please help.