

It is clear that in the age of coronavirus we can no longer as a society afford overcrowded, underregulated, dangerous disease factories that are mink farms in our great state.

It is by sheer luck that Oregon hasn't been the site of a mutation.

There will be another virus or bacteria in the future. It's only a matter of time. Let's do the hard work now of changing our industries and practices today.