

I support funding the Cultural Advocacy Coalition's (CAC) 11 capital construction projects. Each project is important, in its region and in the state overall. I especially support the first item on CAC's list: preservation of Maxville Town site (MHIC) near Joseph. This project preserves a historical site where multicultural logging families contributed to Oregon's timber economy, a cultural contribution that continues today across the state. Furthermore, this project draws in universities from across the state, with programming in archeology, forestry study, historical preservation, and more, and boosts much-needed tourism from across Oregon and beyond.
