

We spend countless hours fishing these out of our waste water treatment plant daily. It's not only disgusting to have to submit your employees to this type of work but very damaging to our system. We currently are fighting a losing battle due to clogged lines that ultimately will cost our small city of just over 400 residents up to $8mil to replace our aging and damaged plant. We have stressed not to flush certain products but nothing states that on the packaging. It's also a huge issue outdoors where people use them while camping and they never degrade. They sit on the ground and blow around, disgusting.
