

This bill sounds like an unnecessary and potentially harmful overreach of the state to control alternative medicine practitioners. This could make it harder for patients to receive legitimate alternative medicine care in lieu of allopathic medicine that is often profit-driven more than patient-centered.