

I realize there is a problem. But labeling is probably not the answer. People should know that nothing but toilet paper goes in a toilet. Everything else goes in garbage.
Legislating every little thing is not effective. Placing more cost on the producer won't stop ignorance..
If you'd teach living skills instead of liberal nonsense in schools maybe it could be addressed..
Or an advertising campaign about how to handle waste products would be a good use of money.
Nobody's going to read this in a container. They have habits already formed. The rest of us know better.
Thank you
