

HOUSING ALLIANCE

June 9, 2021

House Committee on Rules
Oregon State Legislature
900 Court Street NE
Salem, OR 97301

Dear Chair Smith Warner, Vice-Chair Bonham, Vice-Chair Holvey, Members of the Committee:

I am writing to you today on behalf of the Oregon Housing Alliance to express our support for SB 291A and the -A12 amendments, which will increase access to rental housing by requiring individualized assessments for people who have previously been involved in the criminal justice system.

The Oregon Housing Alliance is a coalition of more than ninety organizations from all parts of the state. Our members have come together with the knowledge that housing opportunity is the foundation on which all of our success is built – individual success as students, parents, workers, and community members as well as the success of our communities. We represent a diverse set of voices including affordable housing developers, residents of affordable housing, local jurisdictions, and organizations working to meet basic needs in every corner of our state.

Today, we simply don't have enough affordable homes for people who need them, and vacancy rates have dropped precipitously towards zero in communities across Oregon over the past decade. People – our neighbors and members of our community – are struggling with homelessness, housing instability, rent burdens, and to make ends meet and put food on the table, particularly during this pandemic.

Everyone deserves a place to call home, regardless of whether they've been involved in the criminal justice system.

Today, sentencing disparities and the impacts of systemic racism are pervasive in our justice system. Black people are more likely to be arrested, convicted, and sentenced to lengthy prison sentences than white people. Selective and over-policing of communities of color leads to disproportionate harm due to mass incarceration. These problems are exacerbated by unequal access to justice and legal assistance for people with low incomes.

People who have been involved in the criminal justice system may be automatically screened out of housing simply by checking a box to indicate that they have a criminal history, and landlords may never consider their individual circumstances.

Automatically screening out people with criminal histories mean that people may be shut out of housing options, and preventing people from rebuilding their lives. Assisting people with housing may support people to stabilize¹ and national research shows that people's ability to secure stable housing is critical to their successful re-entry and to prevent further recidivism².

Today, current federal guidance from the US Department of Housing and Urban Development³ recognizes the disparate impact of our criminal justice system and housing access. Fair housing principles recognize that tenants should be screened individually and assess their individual circumstances. Due to the systemic racism pervasive throughout the criminal justice system, using criminal history to predict whether someone will be a successful tenant will likely have a racially discriminatory impact. From the current federal guidance:

While having a criminal record is not a protected characteristic under the Fair Housing Act, criminal history-based restrictions on housing opportunities violate the Act if, without justification, their burden falls more often on renters or other housing market participants of one race or national origin over another (i.e., discriminatory effects liability). Additionally, intentional discrimination in violation of the Act occurs if a housing provider treats individuals with comparable criminal history differently because of their race, national origin or other protected characteristic (i.e., disparate treatment liability).

SB 291A would require landlords to individually assess the circumstances of someone's previous involvement with the criminal justice system and to consider supplemental evidence of rehabilitation – to look at the whole person.

People deserve second chances and the opportunity for forgiveness and redemption. Individualized assessments mean that a landlord must look at the circumstances of individuals, and assess factors such as the crime they were convicted of, the length of time since their conviction, and work they may have done to change their lives.

SB 291A would require landlords to individually assess the circumstances of someone's previous involvement with the criminal justice system. SB 291A would not allow landlords to consider arrest records in cases in which the person was never charged, and would not allow landlords to consider convictions for actions that are no longer illegal under Oregon law, such as simple possession of drugs. Stable housing can help reduce recidivism, and disrupt cycles of incarceration.

Changes to criminal history screening for rental housing could have a significant and positive impact on Black, Indigenous, and people of color who are disproportionately impacted by our criminal justice system. We encourage your support for SB 291A and the -A12 amendments. Thank you very much for your time, and for your service to our state.

Sincerely,

Alison McIntosh
