

I oppose SB 564; Oregon Colleges should offer additional counseling measures for students that are having difficulty with degree completion in all area's of a students life and make it known. College administrators could start a student informational campaign, financial aid counseling should not stop at the revenue stream of the educational system. Is it more of a lack of information or funding? Does DHS not help with child care expenses for low-income college students? Does the Department of Revenue not give childcare tax credit to college students? Where is the weakness in the overall system? Tabulation - study of demographics just puts help for childcare in the instance of college education further away - probably years. Add childcare to 211 system? Because apparently there is no help or citizenry isn't aware of the help that is already enacted.
