

The basic premise of our nation is founded on the belief that all people are equal and have a right to life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness. In order to have access to life, liberty, and happiness people must be healthy and in order to be healthy, they need medical care both when they are sick and when they are healthy to prevent getting sick. Our current system leaves too many people with little or no access to health care resulting in unnecessary deaths and illnesses. The government must step up to fix the system so everyone can enjoy their rights. Enshrining health care as a government-guaranteed right is an essential first step towards following through on the government's responsibility to create the conditions necessary for human happiness.
