

We all know this subject is touchy but the opposition tends to be folks who have never ridden a motorcycle. They say they fear for the riders safety but I'd guess reality is it messes with the irrational sense of fair play "If I have to wait you should wait too!" Or "back of the line pal!". We are all guilty of these thoughts but the truth is there's almost no risk to rider or driver. It reduces traffic and stress on all and I suppose you could argue reduces emissions when you consider less idling.

If you are not a rider or you're a rider that's not confident than let us comfortable confident and responsible riders show you how this can work.
