

Research and the practice of this in other states have shown for a number of reasons why travel between lanes of traffic is vital for people who travel by motorcycle. Most prevalent of all is simply the option to travel between lanes if needed. It is a frightening thought to see a large vehicle pulling up behind you at a red light that seems to not be slowing and not having any options as a motorcyclist. Not to mention the countless motorcycles which are not designed to sit in stand-still traffic and may overheat causing more issues on the road. It does not always make sense to drive between lanes, but it would be very reassuring to know that it was an option and to have that extra layer of safety.
