

I support monitoring medications because as an elementary educator I have seen the negative affects of Ritalin on young children. It is unnecessary. The drug interactions are deadly, drugs change the person so drastically and their more common use makes them more popular. I don't want a drugged society. Look at our Oregon cities. A better therapy is outdoors, exercise, well paced education with practice, not drugging children to "solve social/functional disabilities" induced by invention of diseases. Image that drug money in schools giving children real opportunities as saving lives.
