

To whom this may concern:

I am Jorey Brown, a senior at David Douglas taking English 4 black studies. I am writing this letter because I want all people of color to have taken this class because it teaches a lot about black excellence and about black entrepreneurs I have learned a lot in this class like about how a clock was just the idea of a man taking apart a watch and rebuilding it and ended up making a clock or how a man cut down a frie as thin as he could then put a lot of salt on it and ended up making a chip. There's so much more stuff like we've watched documentaries, movies, the songs we listen to now and back then we read the lyrics and get a better understanding and get an eye opening experience. This isn't like some regular english class where you learn about black history a little bit of MLK or rosa parks this is where you learn things like the black wall street or even Ruby bridges incident I have never in my life even heard or known about these things until now and I don't want that to happen to others I want them to know at young ages so the kids aren't blind to the truth. They need to be exposed to the truth so I think you should vote towards making this an actual class

Sincerely,

Jorey Brown
