

Submitter: Benjamin Juhl
On Behalf Of:
Committee: Senate Committee On Education
Measure: SB1521

The people under the superintendent answer to the superintendent; the people over the superintendent are the board. Very common organizational setup there. If you don't like a superintendent being terminated by the board, well, I don't like everything my boss does either. But responding with a law to make sure it can only happen the way you approve of?? Juvenile. I try to include more thought and depth in my comments on such things, but this one seems like just a reaction on your part, there isn't any depth there to respond to. Which makes it a bad idea on multiple levels.

The way redistricting went, I don't have any illusions that you'll give any consideration to NOT just charging ahead with whatever you want. But it's still a bad idea that won't lead to any better performance by any superintendent anywhere, on top of being a poor reaction.

As always, thank you for whatever consideration you do give my comments,
Ben Juhl
