It is the height of ridiculousness to ban something as necessary to our state economy as diesel fuel. The bill proposes a study on how to produce biofuel from waste wood, which means it's not known if it's even possible, much less scalable to commercial volumes.

By all means, commission a study on production and production to commercial amounts. If the product is competitive, no ban will be needed.

Perhaps the legislature should focus on something a little more critical, such as the low income housing crisis.
