BACKGROUND:

Senate Bill 770 (2019) created the Joint Task Force on Universal Health Care (Task Force), charging it with making recommendations for system of state-based universal care. Oregon's current health care system has multiple public and private funding streams. People in Oregon are enrolled in a wide range of insurance plans with varying levels of coverage and disparate provider networks. Concerns about the existing health care system were identified by the Task Force in its process of public engagement with different Oregon communities and industry groups (link to Task Force public engagement reports).

In its report to the Legislative Assembly, the Task Force offered a blueprint for a system of state-based universal care (link to Final Report). All people who live in Oregon would qualify no matter their job, income, immigration status, or tribal membership. Benefits would be based on those that public employees have now. Instead of paying deductibles, co-pays, or premiums, individuals, households, and employers would pay new taxes based on their income and payroll wages. The Task Force engaged an actuarial consultant to estimate costs and revenues needed to fund the plan (link to actuarial analysis). In its Final Report, the Task Force recommended that a governing board be established to develop plans to implement a system of state-based universal care in Oregon.

SB 704 establishes the Universal Health Plan Governance Board and directs it to design an administrative structure for the Universal Health Plan, to assess the readiness of institutions and infrastructure to carry out the
