BACKGROUND:

The City of Portland operates the state's only streetcar system, which was inaugurated in 2001, becoming the first new streetcar system in the United States since World War II. In 2012, the service was expanded to cross the Willamette River in two locations, creating a loop completed in 2015 that spans over four miles and includes 55 stations. The Streetcar is owned by the City of Portland, managed by a nonprofit corporation Portland Streetcar, Inc., and operated by TriMet. The Streetcar is separate and distinct from TriMet's light rail system.

House Bill 3224 requires three state agencies - the Oregon Department of Transportation, the Oregon Department of Energy, and the Oregon Department of Environmental Quality - to coordinate with the City of Salem and the Salem Area Mass Transit District to study the feasibility of developing a streetcar system. The measure specifies that the hypothetical system should connect West Salem with Salem Hospital, Willamette University, and state offices on the Capitol Mall, which would include a crossing of the Willamette River.
