BACKGROUND:

Oregon's False Claims Act prohibits a person from requesting payment from a government entity when the person knows it is false, or is based on false, fraudulent or concealed information, or when a person benefits from and fails to disclose a false claim when discovered. It prohibits a person from buying or receiving public property from a public employee if the person knows it is not authorized. It further prohibits the use of a false or fraudulent statement to avoid part or all of a financial obligation to a public agency.

The Attorney General (AG) is authorized to serve an investigative demand on persons for oral testimony, answers to written questions, or production of documents or physical evidence. No penalties may be awarded in a false claim action if the defendant provides the AG with all known information about the violation within 30 days of becoming aware of it, prior to the AG commencing formal action, and the defendant fully cooperates in the investigation of the violation.

Senate Bill 311 increases the maximum penalty and time for Attorney General to bring an action for a violation of Oregon's False Claims Act and provides confidentiality for materials or answers received.
