BACKGROUND:

Parents who are experiencing a crisis may, through a properly executed power of attorney, temporarily delegate responsibility for caring for a child to a respite service provider. These providers offer uncompensated, volunteer child care services in order to relieve a parent in crisis from the demands and responsibility of caring for a child. Oregon law requires individuals who have direct unsupervised contact with children, including employees and volunteers affiliated with respite services providers, to enroll in the Central Background Registry operated by the Early Learning Council, which charges fees from individuals to cover the costs of performing the criminal records checks required for enrollment.

House Bill 2599 requires the Early Learning Council to waive the fees charged for enrollment in the Central Background Registry for employees or volunteers who are affiliated with providers of respite services.
