BACKGROUND:

The need for rural fire protection in Oregon was contemplated as early as 1939 by the Legislative Assembly with the creation of Rural Fire Protection Districts (RFPD). RFPDs are a defined area, typically located outside of incorporated cities, which are organized for the purpose of providing fire protection to the inhabitants and property within the district. There are currently 123 RFPDs statewide.

House Bill 2522 as amended by the -2 amendment, creates a RFPD Review Committee and requires the State Fire Marshal to appoint members to this committee as soon as practical. The committee will comprehensively review ORS Chapter 478 statutes governing RFPD's and develop recommendations to modernize and improve their operations. The committee will send a recommendations report to a committee or interim committee of the Legislative Assembly on or before September 15, 2024.
