BACKGROUND:

A community information exchange (CIE) is a network of health care and social service partners that uses a digital platform that allows authorized access to things like a shared resource directory, “closed loop” referrals, reporting, social needs screening, and other features designed to connect people to multiple supports and social services efficiently. House Bill 4150 (2022) directed the Health Information Technology Oversight Council within the Oregon Health Authority to convene a work group that made recommendations and produced a report on how the state could leverage CIEs to improve social and health outcomes. As part of its recommendations, the report advocated for establishing a statewide system of governance for CIEs.

House Bill 3303 establishes the Community Information Exchange Board that would study and make recommendations on CIEs and requires the Department of Administrative Services to publish a list of CIEs that align with best practices based on the recommendations of the board.
