BACKGROUND:

Oregon's farm direct marketing law was enacted in 2011 and allows small farmers to produce and sell low-risk, value-added products that they prepare in their home kitchens from the produce that they grow. All bottled, packaged, and canned products are required to display a label indicating that the product was not prepared in an SB inspected food establishment and that it is not for resale, in addition to other product and producer information. Products are sold at farmers markets, roadside stands, community supported agriculture drop sites, buying clubs, church bazaars, and other venues where sales occur directly between the farmer and retail customer. Under the farm direct marketing law, farmers can sell the following products direct to consumers: fruits, vegetables, and edible flowers and herbs that are fresh, cured, or dried; shelled and unshelled nuts; fruit-based syrups, preserves, and jams; shell eggs; pure honey; olive oil; uncooked grains, legumes, and seeds; and popcorn, nuts, peppers, and corn on the cob that are roasted at the place of purchase after purchase and not sold for immediate consumption. Farmers can also sell the agricultural products of other farmers from the same or adjoining county under consignment. Products currently eligible for consignment sales include: fruits, vegetables, and edible flowers and herbs that are fresh, cured, or dried; unshelled nuts; shell eggs if the seller is a licensed egg handler; pure honey; and olive oil.

Senate Bill 507 A would expand agricultural products allowed for farm direct marketer or consignment sales, raise the annual sales limit for certain fruit-based products and fruit and vegetable juices, and allow for internet sales and third-party contracting for sales support
