BACKGROUND:

Tillamook County lies on Oregon's northern coast which, per the 2020 Census, has a population of 27,390. The county has seven incorporated cities, ranging in population size from 270 in Nehalem to the 5,204 in the City of Tillamook, the county seat. None of its cities are currently affected by the middle housing requirements established in House Bill 2001 or the housing needs analysis and housing production strategy requirements under House Bill 2003, both of which were enacted by the Legislative Assembly in 2019.

House Bill 2001 (2019) required cities with over 25,000 residents, and cities or counties within metropolitan service districts, to allow all middle housing types, including duplexes, on residential zones allowing detached single-family dwellings. Cities with populations between 10,000 and 25,000 outside metropolitan service districts were required to allow duplexes on residential-zoned parcels allowing detached single-family dwellings. Provisions also required cities and counties to undergo a housing needs analysis and put forth housing production strategies to address identified housing needs. House Bill 2003 (2019) required each city with a population greater than 10,000 to conduct a housing needs analysis, and to develop and adopt a housing production strategy to address unmet housing needs.

Senate Bill 406 A takes current middle housing, housing needs analysis, housing production strategy, and buildable lands inventory requirements that apply to larger cities and applies them to all cities, and specified
