BACKGROUND:

Oregon's child abuse reporting laws, compiled in ORS 419B.005 to 419B.050, were enacted in 1993 and have been amended several times, most recently in 2022. Under the current process, the Department of Human Services (DHS) and law enforcement agencies have a shared legal responsibility for receiving and responding to reports of suspected abuse. When a report of suspected child abuse is received by a law enforcement agency or DHS, the law requires either agency to immediately begin an investigation to determine the nature and cause of the abuse and notify all relevant entities based on the nature and cause. The agencies collaborate with other state agencies, including the Office of Child Care and the Oregon Department of Education, and other service providers including school officials and local health and mental health departments to develop specific procedures and guidelines for investigating suspected child abuse. DHS staff work closely with law enforcement agencies and other members of multidisciplinary teams in each county to assess and issue findings on reports of suspected abuse. Investigations are resolved by DHS issuing a finding that the report is either substantiated, unsubstantiated, or inconclusive.

This summary has not been adopted or officially endorsed by action of the committee.

SB 823 A -A5 STAFF MEASURE SUMMARY

While this is an administrative process rather than a criminal investigation, it does not preclude a criminal investigation or prosecution that may occur in tandem or as a result of the findings.

Under Oregon law, Investigations of child abuse conducted by DHS are confidential and largely exempt from public records disclosure laws as provided in ORS chapter 192. DHS may release child abuse and medical records under specific circumstances to a law enforcement agency or a child abuse registry; any medical personnel that is examining, caring or treating a child; attorneys of record for the child or child's parent or guardian; citizen review boards established by the Judicial Department; the Office of Child Care; the Office of Children's Advocate; the Teacher Standards and Practices Commission; Disability Rights Oregon; and the Department of Education (ORS 419B.035). DHS may decide to not disclose the addresses and other identifying information about other children, witnesses, victims, or other persons named in the report or record. The agency may also make certain reports and records available to entities when it is determined that it is necessary to administer its child welfare services; is in the best interests of the affected child; and is necessary to investigate, prevent, or treat child abuse and neglect (ORS 419B.010 to 419B.050).

Senate Bill 823 A requires completed abuse investigation reports to be available for inspection upon written request.
