BACKGROUND:

Senate Bill 856 (2015), also known as Erin's Law, required each school district board to adopt a child sexual abuse instructional program for students in kindergarten through grade 12. In response, the Oregon Department of Education (ODE) convened the Sex Abuse Prevention Advisory Group and published guidance for implementation. Administrative rules for implementing Senate Bill 856 (2015) are embedded in ODE's standards for human sexuality education (OAR 581-022-2050).

Senate Bill 473 requires school district boards to add child sex trafficking prevention curriculum to the mandatory instructional program on child sexual abuse for students in grades kindergarten through 12.
